

THREE WAYS TO BE KRYSHAN

Same roots, same three pillars (Wicked, Generous, Resourceful), same essence. Each kit puts a different pillar first, and everything else follows from that choice: the ground, the accent, the type, the voice, and how the work is framed. All three are built to win. Pick the one that feels like you, then tell me what's wrong with it.

KIT A

Wicked leads. Red on black.

The dark room, one red, one family. The most cinematic; the one the press already describes.

Kit B

Generous leads. Red on warm cream.

The warm room. Mono wordmark, serif quotes. The easiest first impression; the edge lives in the work.

Kit C

Resourceful leads. Green and amber on near-black.

The craft room. Wide caps, a ghost word, R/G/B role tags. The one that sells camera and editing first.

KRYSHAN RANDEL

A tale well told, and a good time telling it.

The dark room. One saturated red that belongs to him, spent on the name, the hover, the active tag and one phrase in the hero; nowhere else. Chrome quieter than the weakest frame in the grid. The professionalism is carried by precision: a single type family at several widths, a strict scale, literal roles, exact credits.

DARK GROUND

ONE ACCENT

ONE FAMILY

Essence. A tale well told, and a good time telling it.

1. WICKED DOMINANT

Wicked but not nasty.

Supporting: wonderfully wrong, deadpan, subversive, cinematic-dark

2. GENEROUS

Generous but not soft.

Supporting: makes people better, credits everyone, safe, warm

3. RESOURCEFUL

Resourceful but not scrappy.

Supporting: any budget, one-person unit, slick, precise

Overlaps. Wicked $\cap$ Generous: safe enough to go dark · Generous $\cap$ Resourceful: makes the most of everyone · Wicked $\cap$ Resourceful: slick on a shoestring

Tie-break. When the wicked choice and the safe choice conflict, wicked wins, and the chrome pays for it with precision.

Red — the only accent; 500 for display and the wordmark, 300–400 for small text and links on black, 700–800 for pressed states

Bone → Ink (neutral) — 50 is body text, 300 secondary text, 800 surfaces and hairlines, 950 the ground

Ramps are built in OKLCH: constant hue, chroma tapering toward the ends, 500 is the exact brand colour. Neutral ramps run 50 (text) to 950 (ground) and are interpolated between the two real endpoints so they never drift.

Contrast at real sizes (WCAG 2.2)

SAMPLE	PAIR	RATIO
Body text	#F1ECE4 on #0B0B0C	16.7:1 · AAA
Secondary	#A3A09B on #0B0B0C	7.6:1 · AAA
Red display	#C81E2A on #0B0B0C	3.4:1 · AA large
Red small (300)	#F2716B on #0B0B0C	6.9:1 · AA
Text on surface	#F1ECE4 on #292828	12.5:1 · AAA
Ink on red (button)	#0B0B0C on #C81E2A	3.4:1 · AA large

Red 500 on black is AA for large text only; small red text uses the 300 step. No red fills behind text except a button with ink on it.

Roles — what each colour is for

	Ground #0B0B0C	Every page. Never pure #000; the frames need somewhere to sit.
	Surface #292828	Overlay backdrop, the contact card, the credits list column.
	Hairline #3B3A39	Thumbnail frames at 40% opacity, dividers. Nothing heavier.
	Text #F1ECE4	All body and titles. Warm, not white.
	Secondary #A3A09B	Roles, years, captions, footer.
	Accent #C81E2A	Wordmark, hover, active role tag, one phrase per page. Punctuation, never a fill.
	Link / small accent #F2716B	Text-size links and focus rings; the 500 fails AA at body size on black.
	Passion / For hire #A3A09B / #C81E2A	The two lanes: for-hire in secondary text, passion tagged in red. The only place colour divides content.

Archivo (variable)	One family across the site. Width 72–80 for the wordmark and headings (the condensed voice of Sanders, mjb, Corkle); width 100 for body; italic for the rare quote. SIL Open Font License.
Why one family	Card A's guardrail is 'resourceful but not scrappy' and 'wicked but not nasty': a single family with real range reads as control. A second face would be decoration.
Not used	No serif, no mono, no display face. Personality is in colour and in the words.

His bio at body size (the first 90 words, as it would set)

Born and raised in BC, I've been making films for as long as I can remember. My career started with producing two fast film contests, The 24 Hour Film Contest and The Great Canadian Commercial Contest. Through these events, I met many of my favourite collaborators and started making short films on weekends with them. I directed two horror shorts for the Bloodshots Film Festival, Jack and The Bully Solution. They won the Audience Choice Award and Grand Jury Prize...

how a laurel sets in this kit: type, not a graphic, until real laurel files arrive

Kryshan Randel

A tale well told, and a good time telling it.

The warm room. Cream instead of black, the same saturated red spent on a monospace wordmark and one phrase, a humanist body face, and an italic serif for the quotes and the Glimpse story. The edge lives in the work, not in the chrome; this is the version a cohousing board, a credit union and a nervous student trust on sight, and Jack is still Jack in the grid.

WARM CREAM GROUND MONO WORDMARK SERIF FOR QUOTES

Essence. A tale well told, and a good time telling it.

1. Generous DOMINANT

Generous but not sentimental.
Supporting: makes people better, safe, warm, second family

2. Wicked

Wicked but not alarming.
Supporting: wonderfully wrong, deadpan, the grin in the thumbnail

3. Resourceful

Resourceful but not cheap.
Supporting: any budget, one-person unit, twenty-seven years

Overlaps. Wicked ∩ Generous: safe enough to go dark · Generous ∩ Resourceful: makes the most of everyone · Wicked ∩ Resourceful: slick on a shoestring

Tie-break. When warmth and edge conflict, warmth wins; the edge lives in the work, not in the chrome.

COLOUR · RAMPS, ROLES, CONTRAST

Red — the only accent; 500 for the wordmark, headings and links on cream; 600–700 for hover and pressed

Cream → Ink (neutral) — 50 is the ground, 200 surfaces, 500 secondary text, 950 body text and the grid's dark cards

Ramps are built in OKLCH: constant hue, chroma tapering toward the ends, 500 is the exact brand colour. Neutral ramps run 50 (text) to 950 (ground) and are interpolated between the two real endpoints so they never drift.

	Secondary #6A665E	Roles, years, captions.
	Accent #C9352E	Wordmark, one phrase per page, links, active tag.
	Quote ink #323029	The italic serif runs slightly softer than body.

Any story. Any budget. Told properly.

The craft room. Near-black, a cooled neon green (Vertigo, Airview) on phrases, tags and the wordmark, and amber (Wild at Heart, 5Rhythms) for the human moments. Wide-tracked uppercase labels, a neutral grotesk, one ghosted giant word behind the hero. The sixty-title credits list and the Leo nomination are central here, not supporting. The only kit where the three roles get colours: R, G, B.

how a laurel sets in this kit: type, not a graphic, until real laurel files arrive

Comment on the feeling first, the hex codes last.

Each kit is the same brand with a different pillar in charge. The useful comment is which one you'd want a producer to land on, and which page in that kit made you flinch. The palette, the type and the lines are all adjustable inside a kit; the thing that isn't adjustable is what leads.

Some things to react to specifically:

- The wordmark: your name in colour, in three different faces.
- The hero line and the accent phrase in it.
- The About opener: two use your bio's first line, one uses a sentence from your Berlinale essay.
- How Jack, 5Rhythms and Just Watch Us look on each ground.
- Kit C's coloured role tags: a yes or a no.
- The 'never' lists: anything you'd fight for.

What is fixed across all three

Your two throughlines as the spine. Precise roles. One award, two festivals, link the rest. Names you may state, never shown. Email on every page. No photos under videos. No festival-list paragraphs. Video plays in one tap without losing the page. Nothing loads until asked.

My recommendation

Kit A. It's the only one that couldn't be anyone else's, and it's how Ain't It Cool News, Rue Morgue and Fantasia already describe you. If it feels like too much for a credit-union producer, Kit B is the same brand with the edge moved from the chrome into the work, and that is a fair place to land. Kit C is right if you want the site to sell camera and editing first.

Facts still pending (nothing here is final until they're answered): the Leo nomination wording, VFS status, the number of Crazy8s films, Bully Solution's award list, Glimpse's distributor, "since 1999" vs 2001, the email to publish, and which social links stay.
